

Cubism

Sara-Jane Gloutnez

In the branches of the tree of knowledge, chickadees covered in burrs are tweeting oxymorons.

The government is a charity
and
the model of good business.

In the conference at the bottom of Lake Simcoe, Mordecai Richler is drunk on owls.
From this perspective he can hear Bracebridge in a seashell.
He takes off his clothes to pay attention.

The double bottom line is that it's important to have networks of angels running the food banks because we like to have fun too.

This week in the world's imagination      Bono is mentoring Barack      on capital and isms.

Communicate ideas in the new language of e-Harmony profiles.

Generation Y has no currency—they barter with mobile apps.

Christopher Wren designed the Church of Social Pornography where they sell photographs of naked angels with their Holy Hannah's half hidden behind strategically placed dollar bills—

their human desire burning holes into dirty money, sparking fires in our own bedrooms

where we practice the language of collaboration.